

SOCIOLOGY 101

Introduction to Sociology

Online Course

Instructor: Daniel Brewster

Email: Daniel.Brewster@mail.wvu.edu

Class Format: This is a web-based course delivered through eCampus. Course materials, assignments, quizzes, examinations, and grades will be administered and posted through eCampus. The course is divided into three sections. I reserve the right to make changes to the syllabus and will notify students with as much warning as possible. It is imperative that you check your email daily.

Course Description:

The purpose of this course is for you as a student to become acquainted with the sociological paradigm. To achieve this feat, it is essential to focus on some of the more basic concepts and definitions, the major theoretical perspectives, research processes, and some of the more controversially audacious sociological topics.

In addition, I want to inform you that sociology is an academic discipline devoted to studying and exploring the interactions between people.

This course satisfies GEF Objective 4: Society and Connections

Expected Learning Outcomes:

- I. Describe how sociology, as a social science, contributes to our understanding of society
- II. Describe how sociology differs from and is like other social sciences and give examples
- III. Compare the basic theoretical orientations in sociology and apply them to explaining a social pattern
- IV. Define, give examples, and demonstrate the relevance of basic sociological concepts and their interconnectedness: Culture, Socialization, Social Structure, Deviance, Social Institutions, Stratification (Race, Class, and Gender), and Social Change
- V. Describe how society shapes the development of individuals and how individuals shape society
- VI. Apply sociological concepts to their own lives
